Yakima Valley Farm Workers Clinic Launches New Website

New site creates improved patient experience

As Yakima Valley Farm Workers Clinic continues to grow to better serve the communities, its digital presence needed to grow with it. That's why Yakima Valley Farm Workers Clinic launched its new patient-focused website this week.

The website was specifically designed with patients in mind, allowing them to easily find their nearest service location, and streamlining access to their personal health records, to make appointments, or order medications. Aligning with the organization's mission to serve patients, website users will be able to read the site in their preferred language on any device.

"As we looked at the design and functionality of our site, we wanted to make sure it was inclusive of our diverse patient population," CEO Carlos Olivares said.

Yakima Valley Farm Workers Clinic has more than 72 unique locations throughout Washington and Oregon, and has a long-standing reputation of passion to serve, and the new site reflects that passion to a greater level.

"It has always been our heart to serve our patients the best way we can," Olivares said. "This is the next step."

Patients can visit the site at www.yvwfc.com to quickly find health care services and providers, schedule their next clinic visit or telehealth appointment, get directions to the nearest clinic, learn about local health events, and even keep track of their medications.
